

- Geography Field Camp to Cambodia (22-28 May 2016)

The annual departmental field camp to Cambodia was successfully held during the period from 22-28 May 2016. The overseas field camp serves as an introduction to fieldwork, allowing students to develop their observational power and investigation skills, and provide meaningful analysis for various geographical inquiries in real-world situations.

Not only were students able to apply their research skills and geographical knowledge in a very different setting to Hong Kong, they were able to synthesize their experiences and insights over the week working together as a group in a final video presentation showcasing the promises and challenges for Cambodia's sustainable energy future. Working in collaboration with the Royal University of Phnom Penh (RUPP), students and staff visited the cities of Phnom Penh and Siem Reap, conducted site visits and interviewed local government officials and villagers.
